AVI Policy Brief: Cambodia's Digital Transformation: Not Only an Urban Matter

High-quality, high-speed Internet is a driver for improving the economy and society. Therefore, Cambodia can consider adapting some relevant projects implemented in other countries to boost digitalisation and address the urban-rural digital divide in the country. Those projects can represent a valuable source of constructive feedback and tips, but they must be tuned to the Cambodian context, culture, and situation.

AVI Researcher Attended a Workshop on “Research Ethnic & Data Intermediaries”

On behalf of Dr. Chheang Vannarith, I attended a workshop on "Research Ethics & Data Intermediaries", organised by the Asia Foundation at Himawari Hotel. The vision of organising open data Intermediaries in Cambodia is a novel bold move and quite an ambitious dream. However, I believe it is doable, with the cooperation of stakeholders, government agencies, academic institutions, and local and international NGOs.
